

Abstract

A new markup language command is provided, which allows to bind a referenced linked document into a master document. When the user activates this control command, the browser embeds at least part of the content of the linked document into the master document and presents the compound document thus created to the user.